Logpoint appoints industry veteran Sean Muirhead as Chief Product Officer

Experienced cybersecurity executive Sean Muirhead joins Logpoint to ensure the company builds security products that fit the challenges customers and partners face regarding cyber risk and threats.

COPENHAGEN & LONDON, February 6, 2024 – Logpoint today announced the appointment of Sean Muirhead as the company’s Chief Product Officer (CPO). Muirhead is a seasoned cybersecurity professional, well-known for his ability to develop and bring products to market. His overall responsibility at Logpoint is to ensure that the company’s products help customers and partners overcome cybersecurity challenges now and in the future.

“Sean has an impressive track record in the cybersecurity industry with direct experience in security operations, sales, and product management and strategy,” says Christian Have, Logpoint CTO. “The conditions in cybersecurity are changing with expanding data and cybersecurity regulations and ever-changing methods of threat actors. Sean’s combined understanding of cyber risk, the threat landscape, and market trends is essential to strengthen Logpoint’s position and execution of the strategy to become a European Cybersecurity powerhouse.”

Muirhead has been a cybersecurity executive for 25 years with extraordinary results for several leading cybersecurity companies, including TrendMicro, Solera Networks, and Sophos. He has successfully managed products throughout lifecycles with significant market success, served as Chief Information Security Officer (CISO), and overseen mergers and acquisitions to fill gaps in product strategies. At Logpoint, he’ll lead the product strategy, go-to-market strategy, and potential strategic acquisitions.

“Logpoint is a focused cybersecurity company on the precipice of a revolution,” says Sean Muirhead, Logpoint CPO. “The company has a lot of excellent intellectual property and skilled people with the potential to solve real future customer problems. I look forward to contributing to the next stages of Logpoint’s journey, further elevating the company and its offerings by innovating against the competitive advantages and driving threat intelligence and automation initiatives.”

Logpoint is the only SIEM vendor in Europe. The platform collects security information from the entire digital infrastructure, analyzes data against contextual information in real time, and provides case management tools to qualify customers and partners to manage threat detection, investigation, and response successfully.
