COPENHAGEN & LONDON – October 4, 2021 – LogPoint, the global cybersecurity innovator, today announced Tim Wallen as Regional Director for the UK & Ireland. Wallen will be responsible for driving strategic growth and leading the growing team of LogPoint sales, marketing, and technical professionals working out of the new LogPoint offices in the City of London.

“I’m excited to join LogPoint at a time where large-scale digital transformation is accelerating, and remote working projects are redefining the way organizations work. As application development and delivery is being revolutionized, there has never been a bigger need to understand the threat landscape for any kind of organization, big or small,” says Tim Wallen. “The cybersecurity market is experiencing a long-awaited technology convergence. It is no longer acceptable to have product silos for detection and response that can barely interoperate. Analysts and hunters need accurate data and automation, and that is exactly what LogPoint provides.”

Wallen joins on the heels of LogPoint’s September 22 announcement of advancing foundational cybersecurity capabilities by including SOAR in its core SIEM solution as standard. Introducing automation, increased speed and precision in incident response, bringing SOAR to organizations of all sizes.

He has held senior sales and management positions within both high-growth and established vendors, including FireMon, ForeScout, Check Point, McAfee, and IBM. Wallen will be reporting to Andrew Lintell, LogPoint VP EMEA, also based in the UK.

“Tim will be leading a fantastic team in the UK, and I believe he has exactly what it takes to expand rapidly to meet the increasing need in the market while nurturing the core culture and high service level that has made LogPoint what it is to date,” says Andrew Lintell, LogPoint VP EMEA. “Tim shares our philosophy, that each and every customer is important, valued and that collaboration and communication is the key to mutual success.”
