Logpoint included in research by leading global research firm

Logpoint aims to deliver complete insights into security posture and performance, empowering organizations to address cybersecurity from a business-value perspective and protect the business appropriately.

COPENHAGEN & BOSTON, December 19, 2022 – Logpoint has been evaluated and included in The Forrester Wave ™: Security Analytics Platforms, Q4 2022. The report evaluates the 14 most significant providers based on 28 different criteria based on current offerings, strategy, and market presence.

"We're truly honored to be included in the Forrester Wave for Security Analytics Platforms. We believe our inclusion in the report is a testament to our challenger mentality and our growth as a company," says Jesper Zerlang, Logpoint CEO. "Our vision is to deliver complete insights into security posture and performance, empowering organizations to address cybersecurity from a business-value perspective and protect the business appropriately."

Logpoint's Converged SIEM platform consolidates SIEM, SOAR, UEBA, and security for business-critical systems such as SAP to accelerate detection and response, enabling efficiencies of scale. It increases security posture, eliminates the complexity of operating siloed products, and allows analysts to automate based on a high-quality data foundation from the entire IT landscape.
